

ITALY'S DEAD MAY REACH APPALLING FIGURE OF 4,000

Nation Mobilizes Self to Bring Quick Relief to The Stricken Section

10,000 PEOPLE INJURED Shocks Created Havoc in Area of 7,500 Square Miles

By Guglielmo Emanuel
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

ROME, July 25.—A stunned nation mutely accepted a government estimated earthquake death toll today of between 2,500 and 3,000 with a prediction that it may reach the appalling figures of 4,000, buried the victims and mobilized itself to bring speedy relief to its stricken areas.

South central Italy, beleaguered by approximately 10,000 injured after six furious shocks that ravaged 7,500 square miles, presented the panorama of a vast relief camp clung into existence on the heels of a tremendous battle. Emergency hospitals, tents, soldiers, campers, doctors and regiments of relief workers spread over the entire ruined sector, where occasional new tremors, windstorms and potential eruptions of ancient volcanoes kept the horror-stricken inhabitants under a nerve-cracking strain.

Hopeful of reducing property loss and subsequent deaths from those injured through highly concentrated and systematic relief work, King Victor Emmanuel hurried to Naples and left to assume personal direction of the work while Premier Benito Mussolini remained in Rome to engineer the vast task before the country.

Pope Pius XI. sent his own emissary into the earthquake area, and personally mobilized the resources and manpower of the church for relief assistance.

Reports from the leveled region continue to be conflicting and indefinite, with many isolated villages in the Avellino and Potenza provinces unheard from. The fate of the 50,000 inhabitants of the towns of Ripacandida, Avigliano, Filiano, Cancellari, San Severino and Sarno remains a potent mystery.

One hundred thousand were bivouacked in fields or temporary shelters set up amidst the ruins.

Some have taken the tragedy about them with the silence of war-time despair; others sit huddled together bewailing and cursing their misfortune.

Eye-witnesses recounted that from Naples on the Tyrrhenian Sea to Bari on the Adriatic, the country is virtually a "no-man's land" and wholly in shambles. Its similarity to war-time spectacles was further heightened by army airplanes soaring about overhead to map out relief plans and by detachments of army signal corps moving "up front" to reestablish communications and lighting between the larger centers.

The latest check-up on the casualties and property damage wreaked by the greatest catastrophe in Italy since the Messina obliteration 22 years ago, leaves no doubt that the Province of Avellino this time was the greatest sufferer. Official reports place the number of dead there at 1,400 and the number of injured at 2,000 with 3,000 homes wrecked.

In the province of Potenza, the farthest south in the earthquake zone, 232 dead were officially counted and more expected.

The toll in the province of Foggia was placed at 120 dead and 1,557 injured.

Villanova led all cities in the number of killed with 400. The dead at Melfi, epicenter of the temblors, have not been tallied but hundreds of bodies have been recovered. Aclonia, Lacedonia and Treviso reported from 200 to about 400 dead each, and hundreds of injured.

Authorities estimated that 60,000 persons were made homeless in Avellino province alone.

While additional deaths are anticipated when the casualties in isolated peasant hamlets have been checked up, it was generally believed that in towns and cities the search for the dead, was nearly ended.

Langham Near Death From Knifewound When Captured

SPANGLER, Pa., July 25.—(INS)—Wracked with pain, his body scratched and torn by stumbling through the mountains in a wild flight to escape capture, Perry Langham, 54, accused killer of his two small children, tossed and muttered incoherently on a cot in Spangler Hospital here today.

Langham was near death, his throat bearing an ugly, self-inflicted knife wound.

He is believed to have slashed his throat in a suicide attempt when the realization came that capture was inevitable.

State Police and Cambria County detectives found the man hiding beneath a stack of hay in a barn near Arcadia last night.

His capture climaxed a man hunt through Cambria and Indiana counties that got under way early Wednesday when Langham's home was dynamited at Emehigh Run, bringing instant death to two of his children and serious injury to his wife, Laura.

The two children who met death in the terrific explosion were Arthur and LaRue Langham, 14 months and 6 years respectively. Two other tots, asleep in the home when the blast let go, miraculously escaped injury.

Tightly clutched in Langham's hands when he was dragged from beneath the pile of hay were a brief, illiterate will and a remorseful poetic tribute to his wife.

The tribute, believed to have been a final gesture toward reconciliation from Mrs. Langham from whom he had been estranged, was scrawled in a nervous hand.

PINCHOT CAMPAIGNING IN LUZERNE COUNTY

Tells in Speech at Wilkes-Barre of Dishonesty Thru Ballots

LIKE COUNTERFEITING

WILKES-BARRE, July 25.—Cofford Pinchot fired the opening gun in his campaign for governor of the Keystone state, here, last night. He addressed 1500 enthusiastic friends gathered at a "victory" dinner.

Pinchot spoke as follows: It is fitting that this, my first political address since the primary, should be made in Luzerne County. For Luzerne County is the battle ground, and out of Luzerne County comes the battle cry of this campaign. That battle cry is STOP THIEF!

Here in Luzerne County, in the bad old days before you men and women, under the wise and masterly leadership of John S. Fine, determined to take back the suffrage which has been stolen from you by election crooks, it was a common practice to print counterfeit ballots and use them to cheat honest citizens of their votes.

Counterfeiting ballots is not essentially different from counterfeiting money or checks, except that it is far worse. A check represents the right to money, to share in a deposit in a bank. A ballot represents the right to liberty, to a share in the government of the Commonwealth.

A check is commonly protected by perforations intended to prevent it from being paid except as the signer intended. The ballots of Luzerne Co. were protected by perforations intended to prevent their being counted except as the voters intended. Both kinds of perforations are in the interest of honesty, and there is no more law against one kind than against the other.

There is as much logic in objecting to the protection of a check by perforation as in objecting to the perforation of a ballot. There is as much justice in the proposed disfranchisement of the Republican voters of Luzerne Co., as there would be in the arrest of a bank cashier who had protected the checks of his bank by perforating them—as much and no more.

The story which led to the perforation of Luzerne County ballots began in 1915. In that year it was discovered that counterfeit ballots were being printed in New Jersey and used to steal votes in Pennsylvania by substituting the counterfeits for the honest ballots in Hanover Township, Wilkes-Barre Township, Plains Township, Avoca Borough, and Larksville Borough. Again in the 1919 county election, similar wholesale use of counterfeit ballots was discovered, and a year or more later, after the Statute of Limitations had run out, the men charged with using them admitted the fraud and boasted of it.

Fraud in elections continued into the campaign of 1926. In that year ballot boxes from Duryea and Plains Township showed that counterfeit ballots had been used to steal votes. This time the counterfeits were printed in the State of New York, and wholesale election frauds were perpetrated in Luzerne County by their use during that election.

It was because of the counterfeit ballots and the history of election frauds in Luzerne County from 1915 to 1926, that the County Commissioners, in the interest of honest elections, were led to perforate the official ballots by special perforating machines. (Continued on Page 5)

Bucks County Right in the Midst of Family Reunion Season —Members of Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs of Doylestown to Visit Camp Buccou—Sportsmen Are to Hold Annual Outing.

DOYLESTOWN, July 25.—Bucks County, the center of more family reunions than any county in the United States, is right in the midst of the famous meetings of the various family clans.

Although the idea of the family reunion is somewhat passing out because of lack of attendance, there is still much enthusiasm left. The advent of the automobile and good roads make more frequent home visits with the family quite common so that annual meetings are not so desirable in these days.

Some of the reunions in Bucks county listed for the future include: Worthington Family, August 30, home of Harry Brown, Hulmeville; Meyer-Meyers Family, Perkasee Park, August 30; McKinstry Family, thirty-fifth annual at Kennedale Farm, Warrington, August 27; Beck Family, August 3, Jerome C. Myers' home, Chalfont; Allen-Yates, third annual, August 13, home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Flack, Forest Grove; Koch, fifth annual, August 9, Forest Park, Chalfont; Louder Family, August 3, home of Mrs. Lucy Bean, Danboro; Freed Family, 17th annual, Perkasee Park, August 9.

Members of the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs of Doylestown will visit Camp Buccou, at Annandale, N. J., on August 12th, and spend the afternoon and evening with the Boy Scouts. This is an annual outing of the two clubs but for the first time this year it will be a joint meeting. Bucks county Scouts are in camp at Buccou.

The twentieth annual outing of the Bucks County Fish, Game and Forestry Association will be held at Forest Park, Chalfont, on Thursday, July 31. The association has 1500 members in Bucks and nearby counties and New Jersey.

Prominent sportsmen of the state will be in attendance. The sports committee has arranged an elaborate program to include a blue rock shoot, quota matches, pinocle matches, rifle matches, races of various kinds. There will be prizes awarded for the largest sunfish and catfish caught.

Mrs. Henry Pickering, Middletown Grange lecturer was appointed a delegate from that Grange to attend either the lecturer's conference at Center Hall, Center county, or the one at Newark, Delaware, as she chooses, at the semi-monthly July meeting at Langhorne.

Hannah Hibbs, Mrs. Frank Thompson and others took part in the literary program discussing vacations and beauty spots in Pennsylvania.

Makefield Young Friends Association and First Day School will picnic at George School on Wednesday, July 30, at 11.30 o'clock. D. S. T. All welcome.

WEALTHY HOBO, DEAD, AIDED BY BRISTOLIANS

J. Eads How Given Ride From Tacony to Bristol Few Years Ago

AN INTERESTING TALKER

The death of James Eads How, "millionaire hobo," in the Staunton, Virginia, hospital, this week, has recalled vividly to the mind of a Bristol woman a time when she was able to be of assistance to the moneyed tramp, and gain some idea of his splendid store of knowledge, gained not only through education but through his travels.

It was in the summer of 1926, that Mrs. Elizabeth Jarvis, 515 Radcliffe street, and her husband, the late H. Lemuel Jarvis, were driving in the vicinity of Tacony and were fortunate enough to choose as one whom they should give a "lift," Mr. How.

The man, then 52, showed the effects of the hot summer day as he stood by the roadside, hoping for a ride. Over his arm was slung a heavy overcoat, probably used as a covering when he was not fortunate enough to gain entrance to a barn or other shelter during the night.

When the Jarvis' halted their machine and started backing, in order to assist the man, the hobo commenced running, rather slowly, toward them, eager for a ride.

A continual flow of conversation, with sentences intelligently formed, was kept up by How, whose identity was then unknown to the Bristolians. The labor situation was spoken of in the one given a ride, and he told his benefactors of problems of the unemployed.

When the trio reached Bristol, Mr. Jarvis informed the rider that he had reached the end of his ride, and if How desired to continue to Trenton and then New York, as he stated he would probably secure another lift by waiting at the corner of Penn St. and the highway.

A printed paper was handed to Mrs. Jarvis by the traveler, who requested that the two read the contents. Upon the margin he scribbled his name, upon their arrival at home proved to be "J. Eads How." In front of the name were written the words, "Best Wishes."

Perusal of the "Hobo News" as the paper was called, showed that it was the summer edition of 1926. Attention was called to the western conference for the "migratory, casual and unemployed, at Sacramento, California, April 30th, May 1st, and 2nd." The group was to consider some of the main problems that confronted them. It was announced that "boes and boettes" were invited.

Fish and Game Association Big Outing is Tomorrow

With all plans completed for their annual outing to be held on the spacious club grounds of Rohm & Haas Company tomorrow afternoon, the members of the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association are looking forward to a rousing good time for themselves and guests.

Owing to the increasing number of ladies attending, the management has devoted more attention to their entertainment and this year provisions have been made for card games for both pinocle and bridge devotees and also checkers.

Tables for the card and checker games will be placed on the lawn under the shade trees and suitable prizes awarded to the successful contestants.

An educational feature of the outing and one that should prove a very interesting part of the occasion will be the exhibit of predatory live animals under the auspices of the Board of Game Commissioners of the State of Pennsylvania, who will explain to those seeking information the traits good and bad of the numerous exhibits. To those not familiar with our wild animals this should prove a source of much educational value.

The afternoon's program as arranged will begin at 1.30 with trap target shooting. This will continue all the afternoon.

Rifle and revolver target shooting is scheduled for the same time, as are also pinocle, bridge, checkers and quilts.

At 12.30 the fly casting contest will be under way, followed at 3 o'clock by bait casting; 3.30, surf casting; and at 4 o'clock, the tug-of-war.

Luncheon will be served free from 2.30 to all who care to enjoy it, and ample provisions have been made to satisfy both the appetite and thirst.

Prizes will be provided in all of the events and no entrance fee will be charged.

Competition is invited for everybody in any or all of the sports, and the scores will be looked after by competent committees.

Starting with a membership of about thirty in January, the association has increased rapidly until at present there are two hundred and fifty-three names enrolled.

This is very gratifying and should result in a much better allotment of game and fish from the Game and Fish Commissioners for restocking next spring.

It was almost entirely due to the efforts of the officers and members of the Bristol association that the English pheasants were liberated in this section, resulting in better sport for all who desire to enjoy this form of outdoor recreation.

LEGIONNAIRES ARE TO MEET AT MORRISVILLE

Ninth District Meeting Scheduled for Tomorrow Evening with Parade

HUNDREDS EXPECTED

MORRISVILLE, July 25.—Several hundred legionnaires are expected to come to this borough Saturday evening in order to attend a district meeting of the American Legion Posts of the ninth district, composed of groups in Bucks and Montgomery counties.

The meeting is held in preparation for the state convention, which will be held in Harrisburg on August 21, 22 and 23. Plans for the part the ninth district will take in the convention will be arranged.

Another important matter that will be before the district Legionnaires is the possible nomination of Frank Schoble, Jr., present national vice commander of the Legion, to the national commandery. Schoble, who is one of the most popular Legionnaires in the country, is a ninth district member.

Thirty-six posts located in the two counties will be represented at the meeting, with a total attendance in the neighborhood of four or five hundred men.

Several national and state officers of the American Legion will attend the meeting, as well as three officers of the Veteran's Bureau of Pennsylvania. Frank Schoble himself will also be present.

Arrangements have been made by nearly 100 members of the William E. Hare Post, Lansdale, to attend the session, and if the group from other posts in the district is in proportion, the crowd will be a banner one.

A street parade through the principal thoroughfares of Morrisville is one of the features of the event. Bugle and drum corps of the various posts will be present.

At the conclusion of the parade the business meeting will take place in the local legion home, when the Schoble campaign will be launched. The election will take place at the national convention which is to be held in Boston in October.

POSTPONE SALE

Troop No. 5 will postpone its bazaar sale which was to be held July 26th. It will be held on August 2nd at one of the stores belonging to Mr. Watson. The stores are under the Bowling Alley.

County Treasurer to Sell 1,000 Properties for Taxes

County Treasurer Johnson has posted a list of over 1000 lots and properties in various sections of Bucks county that will be sold for unpaid taxes on August 4th at the Court House in Doylestown.

The properties and the amount of tax due are posted on small slips tacked to the wall along the corridor of the court house entrance.

Newspaper advertisements of the properties to be sold have also been released.

This is a new procedure for the collection of delinquent taxes and it is the first time that it has been carried out in this county. The law was enacted last year.

At the end of stated periods the tax collectors of all municipalities must furnish to the county commissioners a list of delinquent taxes and the collection thereof is then taken over by the county wherein under the law properties may be sold for the unpaid taxes.

During the past few days a number of summons have been issued for the non-payment of personal taxes in Bristol. Five persons were summoned. Three of them made payments and two were granted an extension of time due to certain conditions.

Those who owe personal taxes may be jailed for the non-payment thereof.

INDEPENDENTS WALLOP FEDERALS; SCORE, 10-3

Victors Come Within Striking Distance of Taking League Lead

FEDERALS IN CELLAR

Schedule For Tonight
CROYDON vs. A. O. H.
Last Night's Results
Independents, 10; Federals, 3

By T. M. Juno

The Independents came within striking distance of first place by defeating the Federals, 10-3, last night on St. Ann's field.

The "Indies" have now won five games and lost two. The Hibernians who are topping the second half teams have had four victories with one defeat. The Federals' loss practically put them out of the running for the second half and assures the baseball fans a playoff sometime in August.

Continuing their hitting pace, the Independents went out and garnered fourteen hits off the delivery of Brooks and Wilkinson. Brooks allowed eight hits and Wilkinson, six. For the second consecutive game every player on the "Indies" nine had at least one hit to their credit.

Although the hitting took a good deal of interest away from his hurling, Milton Jones pitched one of the best games of his career. He allowed the first half winners but three hits. Two of these went to McDevitt. The other was allowed to David and was the only extra base blow of the losers.

The Federals made but one earned run and that was in the first frame. The two runs counted in the third inning were the results of errors, not one hit being made in this inning.

Purcell continued his heavy bombardment against the league pitchers by finding Brooks and Wilkinson for three safe bingles, all singles. F. Hibbs, Romeo, and Jones had two hits to their credit. In the last two games the Independents have made twenty-eight hits and twenty-three runs, a record not to be sneered at. On the defense, their opponents have made but six hits and scored only six runs.

"Heavy" Morrell continued to lead the league in stealing bases by acquiring three more last night. He also gave a fine exhibition of defensive playing, especially in the last inning when he robbed Mulligan of a hit.

Box score:

H. Cochrane cf	1	1	0	0	0
McDevitt 3b	1	1	1	5	0
F. Hibbs ss	2	2	1	2	3

Double play: Brooks to White to David.

Struck out: Jones, 5; Brooks, 0; Wilkinson, 4.

LAD EATS GREEN APPLES; FORCED TO QUIT PERCH

Carl Dapp, Cornwells Heights, Ends Career With A Stomach Ache

OTHERS STILL ON JOB

Three Tree-Sitting Groups Continue; Also Cycling Contest

Tree sitters:
Carl Dapp, 13, Cornwells Heights. Up since 6.30 p. m., July 17th. Discontinued attempt last evening.

William and Thomas Evans, 13 and 12 respectively, Croydon. Up since July 19th.

William Miles and William Dowd, 17 and 18 respectively, Bristol, Green Lane and Highway. Up since 5.30 p. m., July 22nd.

James Mandeville, 18, and Armand Bunnchinn, 17, south of Adams Hollow Creek, Bristol. Up since 9.30 p. m., July 23rd.

Bicycle:

Peter Firc, Edward Hilgendorf, Serrill Kemble, Edwin Kemble, Edgely. Riding since 12 o'clock noon, July 24th.

Carl Dapp, who since July 17th has been enjoying a siesta in his perch in a tree along Bristol Pike in Cornwells Heights, was forced to quit his attempt at gaining the endurance record for tree-sitting, last night, and all because of a boy's appetite.

Carl likes apples, green or otherwise, it makes little difference. His food has been splendid, but what boy wouldn't eat green apples if he had the chance.

The hard green surface made a crunching sound when Carl's teeth were sunk into it, and it didn't taste so very sour. In fact it was filling, but too filling in the end.

Soon Carl started to feel uneasy, then he squirmed, next he moved about in the tree, and finally when that uneasy feeling got the better of him, he slid to the ground.

The next thing that went into Carl's mouth was something that didn't taste so good as the food he has had for the past several days, and in fact something that tasted a lot worse than green apples. But by this time Carl is feeling easier.

Even if he isn't cured of tree-sitting, he has learned his lesson better than Adam—or at least the next apples he chooses will be well-ripened.

Two additional individuals have entered the list of those in endurance contests in the vicinity of Bristol, lads from Croydon having by this time run up several hours of tree-sitting to their credit.

Ever since Saturday evening have William and Thomas Evans, aged 13 and 12 years respectively, been seated upon their perch in a tree at Main street, just off Cedar avenue, in Croydon.

The Evans lads are especially glad of those when they picked for their ground crew, which group assisted by Mrs. Evans, mother of the youngsters, keep the couple supplied with tasty dishes. Then too, there are ever present interested friends who help the hours to pass more quickly.

Many suggestions were in order when well-wishers visited the two boys shortly after they "took-off" Saturday. One was the placing of a large rusty tin can in the tree, and upon this boys have placed a sign reading "Donations Received Here."

The Evans boys' attempts to make their perch habitable is quite amusing. They have provided a rocking chair, which is placed in the crotch of the tree, and William reclines there when "Tommy" is induced to relinquish it.

"Tommy" appears to have complete possession of the sleeping equipment, which consists of an old canvas tent, spread over various limbs and branches. It was under this tent that the two sought protection during the storm of Tuesday. Desperately they clung to the tree while the wind blew, but in a few seconds after the storm broke the "tent" was hurled to the ground. Still they hung in mid-air.

The daily routine of the Evans' is irregular. They arise when they please; and then the "refueling" begins. Mrs. Evans humors her boys as regards the food for their meals, and it is served by means of a clothesline suspended from the tree, and the food is delivered in a container of fair size. Reading is one of their chief means of pastime.

Special signs are used by the ground crew to announce items that are unusual in regards to the tree-sitters.

To date they have nearly 150 hours to their credit.

In the group of four boys in Edgely who are out to break the endurance record for bicycle riding, and who are turning the pedals many hundreds of times as they go about the streets of that village, one name is changed. The original group was to have been: Peter Firc, Edward Hilgendorf, Serrill Kemble and Robert Firman, all of Edgely. Robert Firman, did not start with the group as was intended, and so his place was taken by Edwin Kemble, brother of Serrill. These boys are working in six-hour shifts.

MIDGET GOLF

Many and various have been the invasions of America. There was mah jong, bridge, the cross-word puzzle, golf and the Japanese beetle, but unique among them is the present invasion by Tom Thumb golf.

The miniature courses of the "multum in parvo" golf game are to be found along every highway, at every resort, on every convenient vacant lot upon which squatter's rights have not already been exercised by a gas station, and within the gates of private estates. They vary from the professional courses to the fearful and wonderful backyard constructions of imaginative schoolboys.

Even those who take their grown-up golf seriously and solemnly maintain that the midget game has illicitly appropriated the name of their ancient and honorable pastime, are to be found in increasing numbers putting and putting on the baby hazards and on the trick greens.

At bottom this new fad is like its more expansive and expensive model. Both consist of manufactured difficulties and irritations, and both seem to exercise an unholy fascination. And there is a strong probability that this two-by-four imitation of the cow-pasture pastime may prove as enduring as its predecessor. It is within the realm of possibility that it will settle down into a game of genuine skill and interest with national rules and tournaments.

This new fad has invaded Bristol, and we have two courses.

DO WE HAVE THE COURAGE?

Do we have the courage, or the sense, to face our own shortcomings to admit to ourselves and to all concerned our errors and mistakes?

If we do not have, there is little chance that we shall ever be much better equipped to fight our battles than we are today.

Only obstinacy refuses to confess error and only vanity declines to admit defeat. Obstinacy and vanity are drags upon the chariot of progress. Unless we cut them loose we do not get very far.

The same truth holds for the individual, the group, the community, the nation. History is replete with instances of fine heads battered against the impenetrable wall of unalterable fact, of fine causes lost by enthusiasts who clung tenaciously to original error, of cities stunted because they were too proud to change their habits, of nations wrecked upon the shoals of their selfish desire.

There is no shame in admitting failure or mistake, either to ourselves or to observers. We cannot long delude those who watch, and they will respect us the more highly if we frankly confess, when we miff the ball, that it was our fault.

As long as we are not too vain to face the facts of our conduct there is hope for us. But we will never be useful to our teammates in life as long as we hypnotize ourselves into belief that we have made a home run with the bases full after we have just struck out.

One good thing about an endurance flight. It affords opportunity to get a mustache far enough along the escape amused glances.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ferd Reetz, of Main street, at the private hospital of Dr. J. Fred Wagner, Bristol, on Wednesday. The mother will be remembered as Miss Thelma Doran.

Harry C. Dickson died at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. McVay, Neshaminy street at Green, yesterday morning. The late Mr. Dickson, who was 71 years of age, had been ill but a short time. He was a former resident of Brooklyn. The body was forwarded to Mr. Olivet, L. I., where burial will be made tomorrow afternoon.

New floors are being placed in some of the rooms of the Hulmeville public schools, and in some instances platforms in the rooms rebuilt, as well as portions of the stairways. New joists are replacing old ones in some portions of the structure, and plastering work being done where necessary. Renovations are also being made to the heating system.

"Show of Shows," the Warner Bros. Vitaphone picture was the source for the material on which these stories are based.

FORTIFIED by the best ten-cent egg sandwich Hollywood afforded, Leo Hanlon set out to give the West Coast a thorough licking. As he considered the situation, he decided that all the signs were propitious. His complete insolvency made it possible—indeed, inevitable—for him to begin at the bottom. And study of the lives of successful Americans had assured him that poverty was a desirable condition.

Warming to his campaign, he reflected that his chances were somewhat brighter than Ben Franklin's: Franklin arrived in Philadelphia with three buns. Also, hadn't he been encouraged by the smile—or was it a giggle?—of the future Mrs. Franklin?

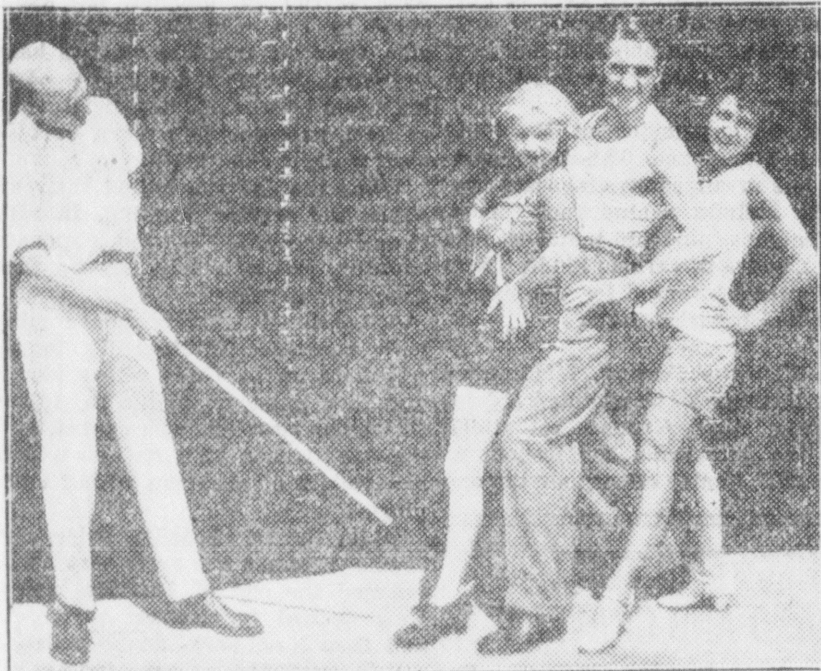

In the midst of these reflections a Leo was all but pitched from the curb by what he later discovered

"Sure, you know," Cronk reminded him, "that dance director who showed us how to hoof for that college caper."

"Oh, I recall him," "Well, get this: he's out here staging dances for Warner Bros. Say, Leo, how'd you click with him?"

"Oh, I don't know. We were all pretty awful, naturally. Still, I managed to get on and off the stage without falling. I can still negotiate a pretty good back routine, though I don't suppose it's anything that'd make Jack Donaghy throw away his shoes."

He had scarcely finished speaking before Cronk was halfway across the restaurant. He vaulted into a telephone booth. A few minutes later he emerged bearing a grin which re-enforced Leo's to be a joyful greeting from his old pal, Harry Cronk. Harry was fond of greeting old friends somewhat in the manner of a fullback going off tackle. Enthusiastic, too enough, but a bit wearing.

"Leo!" he greeted the unsettled Hanlon, "how come you're in Hollywood?"

"You tell me," returned Leo, shaking hands with Cronk. "Glad to see you, Harry."

"Come along," invited Cronk; "I'm on my way to lunch. You bound anywhere?"

"No," said Leo; "glad to join you. In fact, I'm overjoyed."

Harry was instantly alert. "Broke?" he asked.

"Stony," admitted Leo. "It's a Hollywood habit."

Over their luncheon they discussed measures calculated to relieve Leo's financial sufferings. Cronk, a press agent for Exalted Films, Inc., agreed to sound out a number of executives in the industry as to the possibilities of embodying Leo's name on somebody's payroll. He was especially hopeful of persuading some casting director to place his friend in a small part in a picture.

"But I'm no actor," protested Hanlon.

"Who says you aren't?" demanded Cronk. "If you're down on the payroll as an actor, who is going to prove you're anything else?"

"But I'd be a flop," argued Leo. "You remember that time in college, in our class show, when I went all to pieces and—"

"That's an idea!" Cronk interrupted excitedly. "Look! You're set. That college show gives me a start. You remember Larry Ceballos, don't you?"

"Ceballos?" Leo was puzzled.

belief that starting at the bottom wasn't so bad.

"All set," he informed the eager Leo.

"I'm hired, you mean?" Leo's tone was eager.

"Who am I," demanded Cronk, "a miracle worker? Course you're not hired. But I've talked Larry into looking you over. See him at ten tomorrow. And don't forget it; that's some break, kid."

"I know, Harry," admitted Leo, "and I'm grateful."

On the sidewalk again, Harry prepared to take leave of his friend to keep an appointment. Eliciting from Leo the tidings that the latter had no place to sleep, and no baggage, he gave him a key to his bungalow, mentioning an address on Gower street, just off Hollywood Boulevard.

"Move in until your first ghost walks," he invited. He thrust a twenty dollar note into Leo's hand.

"Something for cigarettes and pate de fois gras for the time being," he explained.

"I'll be all right, Harry," Leo said hastily, making a gallant if not wholly sincere effort to return the money.

"Behave!" commanded Cronk. "Say, the way you vanquished those victuals just now. Tipped me off that your content of hot meat isn't all it should be. We make loans in Hollywood now, too. It's getting to be quite a popular custom."

Leo pocketed the note, expressing his thanks.

"See you at the bungalow tonight," continued Cronk. "I'll take you out playing bridge. We play for one-twenty-seventh of a cent a point. At that sum you can't lose; 'Sbody can figure fractions that involved. So long."

THE REAL LIQUOR EVIL—LIQUOR

To the Editor of the Evening Ledger:
The illicit traffic in alcoholic beverages is a veritable appendix inherited from the saloon. It existed along with the legal sale and was inextricably bound up with it. The terms speakeasy, bootlegger, moonshine, blind pig and many others were coined long before the war to describe illegal traffic then. My own observation is that here in Western Pennsylvania the present illegal traffic is considerably less in volume than it was during the days of license. We are rid of the saloon, which no one now defends, and have the diminished unlawful traffic on the defensive and in an undefendable position.

The great trouble the wets encounter is that they have no plan to substitute for prohibition. Government sale and control were tried by South Carolina before the war and found worse than the old saloon, and therefore dropped. Canada is already finding that Government control can greatly increase the sale of beer and whisky but is unable to prevent an appalling increase in the deaths by automobile accidents. The health authorities of that land were rejoicing at the steady fall in the tuberculosis death rate during the prohibition period; they are now faced with an abrupt rise in 1926 and a very slight fall in 1927. In this land the rate for that disease has fallen every year since 1913 except for a rise of less than one in 100,000 for 1926. In 1913 our death rate from that cause was over 133; in 1927 it was under 72, a gain of over sixty.

The plain fact is that it was not the saloon that made liquor bad, nor is it the speakeasy that is evil, but the alcoholic liquor sold, no matter what the name is. You may call the animal Mephistopheles Americana, but it will smell just as bad as if you called it skunk or polecat. Every conceivable method of preserving the animal and avoiding the smell has been tried and found hopeless; the only thing left is to bury the "critter." Even then the smell will linger, but time will wear that out.

IN MEMORIAM

SPEZZANO—In loving memory of our dear niece and cousin, Anna May, who left us two years ago today.
We loved her then, we love her still.
Forget her? No, we never will!
For she was loving and dear to all.

MURPHY—In loving remembrance of my dear friend, Theresa, who died July 25, 1929.

There is someone who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you went.

There is someone who thinks of you always;
Gone is the face I loved so dear;
Silent the voice I loved to hear.

'Tis sad, but true; I wonder why
The best are always the first to die?
Sadly missed by a friend.

Business Men Tour Sand and Gravel Pits

ton, Wilkes-Barre and Reading. One day last week we shipped 2,000 bushels of beans to a Maryland cannery.
Approximately 700 acres are under cultivation.

On this farm of over 700 acres there is not a single horse employed, and the gasoline filling station has replaced the haymow.

Charles W. Warner, president of Warner Sand Company, welcomed the guests and said that such gatherings produced a spirit of harmony and co-operation. "The nature of our business does not always add to the picturesque of the section," said Mr. Warner. He then explained how the Kings Farm Company was restoring to the area some of its former beauty and predicted that some day there might be a health resort along the great lakes which are being dredged and perhaps an amusement park on Turkey Hill.

Senator Clarence J. Buckman dwelt upon the historical nature of the neighborhood and told how the VanSciver Sand Company had agreed to deed to the State Historical Commission the land occupied by the home of William Penn or Pennsylvania.

The Senator said that he had had the pleasure of introducing the act which would ultimately make Pennsylvania a historic shrine. He complimented the Warner Company for having carried out the obligation of the VanSciver Company although they in no way were obligated so to do. "It was a moral obligation which they inherited from the VanSciver Company which they purchased and they have shown that they are interested in the community by deeding this piece of ground, free of charge, to the Commonwealth," he said.

MORE ARMY TRUCKS

Another caravan of army motor trucks passed through Bristol this morning enroute to New York army camps. The caravan was escorted by a detail of Pennsylvania Highway Motor Patrolmen from the Philadelphia city line to the New Jersey State line.

STATE NEWS

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., July 25—It takes just three lines, or 15 words for L. R. Tittsworth, of this city, to sum up existing conditions in this country. After a 14,000-mile trip through twenty-seven states and Canada, Tittsworth when asked to give his opinion of conditions, said:

"Drunk on jazz and radio, crazy over picture shows and going to perdition on gasoline."

of which there are no duplicates.

The perforations consisted in punching in the outside margin of the ballot the same number in every ballot supplied to the same polling place.

Ballots so perforated were first used in the primary election of September, 1927. They have been used in every primary, special, and general election since that date. The primary election just held is the eighth successive election with perforated ballots in Luzerne County.

Substantially every County, Township, and Borough official in office in Luzerne County today was nominated and elected by perforated ballots. All of the County Commissioners (who compose the Returning Board) were so elected. The sitting Congressman was so elected, the ballots of Luzerne County cast for two Superior Court Judges were perforated, and three out of the five sitting members of the Court of Common Pleas were elected by perforated ballots.

The perforations, now for the first time objected to, were placed on the official ballot this year for the eighth successive time with the knowledge and consent of a majority of the County Commissioners. They were authorized and directed by a majority of the Court of Common Pleas. The court directed that the perforations should be made under the supervision of the Secretary of the Judges.

There is not now, and never has been, any contention that a single vote was changed either for or against any candidate by reason of the perforations. There is not now, and never has been, any contention that the secrecy of the ballot was violated by the perforations. In a word, there is and there has been no contention that the recent election in Luzerne County failed in any respect to express the honest will of the voters of the County.

If these perforations are contrary to the election laws of the State, it is extraordinary that for seven successive elections no one was found to object to them. It is extraordinary that the counsel for Francis Shunk Brown, when he ran for Judge and was defeated by perforated ballots, although he raised the cry of fraud, said nothing against the perforations. It is worth noting that the only member of the Luzerne County Court to hold that the perforations are illegal was himself elected by perforated ballots.

The foregoing statements of fact make two things absolutely clear. First, that the primary election in Luzerne County, perforations and all, was an honest election which truly reflected the will of the voters in Luzerne County. Second, that the question at issue is in no sense a question of legal technicalities.

The issue in this case is greater than any hair-splitting legal distinctions. It is greater than the fortunes of any candidate. It is even greater than the disfranchisement of 70,000 Republican voters of Luzerne County. It involves the disfranchisement of the Republican voters of all Pennsylvania, for if the Republicans of Luzerne County are disfranchised, the result of the primary will be changed and the Republican voters of the State will be disfranchised with them.

But an even greater issue is at stake, for the issue in this case is the greatest issue that can ever come before a democracy. It is this: Does the will of the people control, or is some other will superior to it?

Throughout the ages the peoples of the earth have been struggling toward one great goal, the goal of self-government. In that struggle the weapon in the hands of the people is the ballot. Through the ballot the people have earned the right to govern themselves. Through the ballot they safeguard and maintain that right. If the ballot ceases to express the will of the people, democracy ceases with it.

Except in war alone, no more dangerous attack ever has been or ever can be made on the type of government upon which we Americans pride ourselves, upon the government which was established by our forefathers, maintained by their sons, and handed on to us as the best government in all the earth.

Our government is founded on the ballot, and whoever attacks the sanctity of the ballot strikes at the heart of the integrity and the permanence of popular rule. That is why the effort of Brown and a few of his followers to steal an election has so gripped the attention of the people of Pennsylvania, and is of such paramount consequence to every citizen of the State.

Certain elements in the Philadelphia organization have become famous throughout America and the World for election frauds. After having lost it in the Primary, their leaders are now attempting to steal the nomination for the Governorship. The attempt is thoroughly in accord with the pre-filthy history of these leaders, and with their notorious lack of sportsmanship. Having been honestly beaten, they refuse to abide by the rules of the game, and are now attempting to get by the cheapest of chicanery what they lost to an opponent who used only fair and open means.

The men who are thus trying to overthrow the results of a Republican Primary by theft are also openly threatening to bolt the Republican Ticket if their efforts to steal should fail. Here is a new part for them to play. Hitherto they have been sticklers for regularity. They have always regarded failure to stand by the Republican ticket as the last and lowest of political sins.

There is no abuse these men have not heaped upon the bolter, the independent, the voter who does not follow blindly the verdict of the party machinery. Now these same men are openly proposing to throw overboard the traditions of half a century and bolt the Republican nominee for Governor, for no better ostensible pretext than that they prefer someone else.

Such conduct demands an explanation. Low as are the political morals of these men, ready as they have always been to use the political machinery to their own advantage, this is something new. What is the reason?

The reason is clear as crystal. Back of the disgruntled elements of the Philadelphia machine, stand certain extortionate public utilities of Pennsylvania, arrayed against the Republican Nominee for Governor because his platform does not suit them. These same extortionate utilities, who represent only a portion of the utility field, have long controlled many leaderships of the Philadelphia organization.

They are now using that control to accomplish what these utilities want done.

What they want now is the selection, otherwise than by the ballot, of a Governor favorable to their present practice of over-charging the people of Pennsylvania for the services they render. To accomplish this purpose they are willing to go even so far as to disfranchise the Republicans of the State.

Those who have wondered at the lack of sportsmanship of Francis Shunk Brown and his associates should remember that there is behind it far more than a refusal to abide by the result of the Primary. The moving force is neither the natural desire of gangsters to win by unfair means, nor even the hope of controlling the government at Harrisburg from Philadelphia, powerful as that motive may well be. The real reason behind the effort to steal the election of a Governor is the determination of certain public utilities in Pennsylvania to put their own man in office, and through him to control the State government as they have long controlled the Public Service Commission.

At the head of this conspiracy is W. W. Atterbury, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, member of the Republican National Committee, whose present excursion into politics is doing him no good, and the stockholders of the Pennsylvania Railroad much harm.

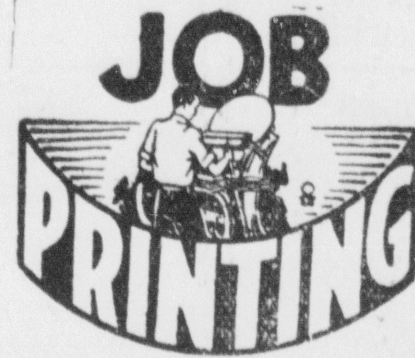

The Atterbury-Brown conspirators cannot win. One reason is that their case is bad. The perforations are fair and honest and the only effect they had was to check fraud.

Another reason, simple but entirely sufficient, is the unquestioned fact that the press and the people of Pennsylvania are almost unanimously against their attempt to steal the Governorship. No matter what the Supreme Court may say, the Atterbury-Brown conspiracy will lose to the people.

Is Mercy Murder Justified to Ease Suffering of Loved One?

Juries Present Dilemma in Failure to Convict Parents Who Slay to End Child's Pain

JOHN A. BARTON. • MR. • MRS. THOMAS • RICHARD CORBETT WIDDICOMB. and MOTHER

WALTON, N. Y., July 25—Is 77-year-old Andrew L. Beers a maniac, the imprisoned man in his cell. They cold-blooded murderer or a human all agree with the neighbors that old age and worry had unbalanced their father's mind.

The aged man is imprisoned in the Delaware County Jail on a charge of killing his mentally defective daughter Frances. Beers told the police he disposed of Frances with poison, an ice-pick and a wrench, because he could not bear to see her suffer longer.

This is not the first case in recent years that a parent has put to death a child because of his hopeless physical or mental state. Each time the authorities find themselves in the same quandary. What shall be done with a person who takes the law into his own hands, and ends another human being's torture?

There is the instance of Thomas Widdicombe, of New York, who turned on the gas, asphyxiating his wife and himself on their 54th wedding anniversary. Aged Mr. Widdicombe committed his ghastly act to prevent his wife being sent to the hospital.

French authorities freed Richard Corbett after he had shot and killed his mother to save her from a painful, lingering death from cancer.

In Minnesota a year or two ago, John A. Barton, a bank president killed his seventeen-year-old mute and crippled daughter, Barton then immediately turned his weapon upon himself.

Frances Beers was 27 when her father ended her life. Since her birth she had been mentally defective. There are two other daughters and a son, all of them normal.

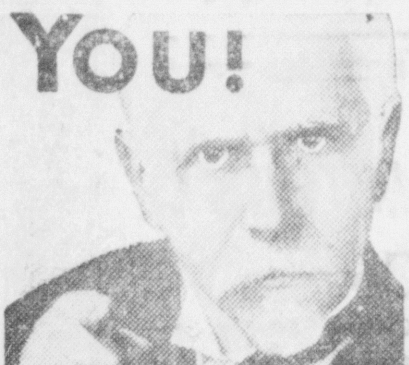

The others are married and when the mother of the family died a year ago, she left Beers and Frances alone in the house. To neighbors the old man confided the fear that he might die and leave his helpless daughter alone in the world.

One night he could stand the torture no longer. Going to Frances he fed her Paris Green and then arsenic. The feeble-minded girl took both, but because of an overdose the death poison had no effect. It was then that the old man picked up the ice-pick and wrench and used them with deadly effect.

Calmly he walked out of the house to the local undertaker's "Come up to my house," he said, "and take care of my girl. I have just put her out of the way."

Brought to jail, Beers said he had planned to take his own life but was so dazed by his murder of Frances that the suicide intention slipped his mind.

Neighbors told the police that the devotion of Beers to his daughter was an epic tale of the village. They believe that the aged murderer was out of his mind when he committed his terrible deed.

TAKE MY ADVICE

Be warned by those occasional twinges of sick headaches, biliousness, heartburn, belching and bloating, gas and other symptoms of constipation! Take care or the attacks may come more frequently.

Don't eat foods that disagree with you. Drink more water. Get out in the sunshine. Take a good spoonful of Flaxolyn to clean out the stored up wastes in your bowels. Flaxolyn is a great stimulant to the appetite, a wonderfully efficient laxative, a mild diuretic for the kidneys.

THRONE PLOT EMBROILS SEVERAL COUNTRIES

By J. C. Oestreicher
I. N. S. Cable Editor

NEW YORK, July 25.—A handsome, fair-haired lad approaching eighteen, well set up and strong and bearing in his veins the blood of the proud Hapsburgs, promises to supply the stormy Balkans with another of those "ripples" whose repercussions may be heard throughout the length and breadth of Europe.

He is the Archduke Otto, pretender to the crown of Hungary, who plans in the fall of this year to march on to Budapest and take his place on the throne of his fathers.

All doubt that plans were hatching for a Hapsburg restoration in Hungary, have now been dispelled, and November 20, the day of Otto's 18th birthday, has been chosen for the projected coup d'etat. Whether it will succeed as well as that of King Carol of Roumania or whether it will fail miserably and see Otto once more sent into exile, is something that time alone can tell. International observers are unanimous in the belief that the young Hapsburg faces a much more difficult task than that of the adventurous Hohenzollern who deposed his son and took over royal prerogatives in Bucharest.

Carol's successful coup, of course, has paved the way to some extent for a monarchical restoration in Hungary, but there are so many international and political obstacles in the way of Otto's return that it is impossible to see for him a clear path from his place of exile in Belgium to the royal palace in Budapest.

Carol's return was merely the substitution of one king for another and the assumption of power by a mature pretender in place of an awkward and lumbering Regency Council. In Hungary, restoration will mean complete reversal of the present order of things, the recreation of a monarchy in a country now quite accustomed to struggling along without a crown, and the diplomatic handling of many delicate problems certain to rise when Otto starts his march on the capital.

To begin with, Hungary is and has been for many years the pivotal point of Balkan problems. Though small, it holds a strategic position on the chess-board of European relationships. Situated in the very hub of the Balkans, it is a nation looked upon with greedy eyes by all its neighbors, weak or strong and its "sphere of influence" has spread as far as France and the British Isles.

Roumania is outspokenly opposed to a Hapsburg restoration. Premier Jules Maniu, in an interview with Frederic K. Abbott, International News Service Paris manager, who visited Bucharest recently, declared that "there are many things Roumania will stand for, but the return of the Hapsburgs in Hungary is not one of them."

Maniu, and in this he is supported by King Carol, are working tooth and nail for a Roumanian-Hungarian alliance resulting eventually in a dual monarchy under Roumanian domination. This plan seems unlikely to meet with the favor of Hungary, particularly because Carol is a Hohenzollern and the Hohenzollerns are far removed from Hungarian blood.

Rumors emanating from various European capitals, confirmed to some extent at least by statements of Premier Benito Mussolini, indicate that Italy is bidding strongly for Hungary's support and therefore may be considered a likely protagonist for Otto's return if the people of Hungary signify their desire to replace the Hapsburgs on their throne.

Against Italy stands France, suspicious of Mussolini's activities in the Balkans, and openly fearful of H Duce's growing power and popularity in Central Europe. France as a whole cares little or not whether Otto succeeds in his attempt. Its statesmen, however, are looking further ahead and visualizing the possible results of a strong bond between Hungary and France's Mediterranean neighbor.

From the legal point of view, Otto's restoration will be simple. Following the overthrow of the Hapsburgs and the creation of a Soviet regime in Hungary, that nation passed through several years of political turmoil, which included the founding of a short-lived Republic and the establishment of the Regency now in power under the leadership of Admiral Horthy.

Admiral Horthy's first act as Regent was to declare the Hapsburg crown as de jure sovereign, wiping the Soviet and Republican governments completely off the books. He declared the monarchy still in power, the return of the sovereign dependent solely upon the will of the Hungarian people.

But the tide of history has taken the matter out of the hands of Hungary alone. Almost all the nations of Europe have their fingers in Hungary's political pie. If Otto succeeds it will be because the chessmasters of Europe are willing that he should.
